

Low Autumnal sun Lifeguard Boat launch at Morecombe Bay

I really liked how the low autumnal sun silhouetted the boat launch in a way that really enhanced it but equally showcased the beauty of Britain's coastal towns. This picture makes you feel that no matter what problems are currently happening in the world, there is a glimmer of hope that we will get through them. It fills you with warmth on a cold day.

- An Autumn day in Nottingham that showcases the transition from Summer to Autumn
- This photo was taken at Millennium Park inside Nottingham University Campus. There is variety throughout this picture: from the semi-circular pond, to the conical shape of the trees and finally to the multi-coloured trees that showcase the true beauty of autumn.

This is Autumn to me.

Photos:

Description:

- The photo on TOP LEFT is showing a very close up picture of a brownny-orangy leaf with some texture.

- The photo on TOP RIGHT is showing a wood at the bottom and a leaf covering it to make it look like a cave with an autumny-like style.
- The photo on BOTTOM LEFT are the veins of a leaf creating a very cool pumpkin-y colour.
- The photo on BOTTOM RIGHT is the body of a tree, looking like a bunch of mushrooms next to each other.

All 4 are landscape photos of the coast of Devon and represent autumn to me as I've been going to this coastline every autumn for years
